Greetings! I would like to extend a personal invitation to each of you to attend this summer’s historic joint meeting of the National Dental Association, Hispanic Dental Association, and Society of American Indian Dentists. Collectively, we will address the needs and concerns of the communities we serve. The meeting is called the Multi-Cultural Oral Health Summit, and will take place at the fabulous Boca Raton Resort & Club in Boca Raton, FL, July 20-24, 2012. The theme of the Summit is “Collectively Meeting the Needs of a Diverse Population to Improve Oral Health.”

Attendees at the convention will include dentists, hygienists, dental assistants, dental school faculty and administrators, public sector leaders, community organizations, other associations, technical exhibitors, and corporation who are stakeholders in oral health. The program has been carefully designed to include something for everyone: scientific courses, the Minority Faculty, Administrators’ and Practitioners’ Forum with an emphasis on research, a two-part Presidents’ Symposium with community participants addressing concerns and posing solutions for vulnerable populations, New Dentist Conference focusing on business principles, and a Technical Exhibitor’s Showcase, including a Silent Auction. This exciting convention is one that you will not want to miss!

Since January, when I officially began my term as NDA President, I have traveled extensively, meeting with other organizations, legislators, dental school administrators, and corporations, representing the organization in support of dentistry and oral health. I am looking forward to many more productive meetings; and am pleased to report that the NDA is moving forward at “full force” and is solidly on track with our mission and stated goals. We have an exceptional Executive Leadership team, Board of Trustees, House of Delegates, and NDA Headquarters Staff. I thank them, and all of you for your loyalty and continued support of the NDA.

See You in Boca!

elected to the Dental Assisting National Board, Inc. (DANB) Board of Directors. Dr. Dawley is a practicing dentist who was elected from a slate of qualified nominees provided by the American Dental Association (ADA).

“I believe DANB serves a vital role to the practice of dentistry,” she says. “I strongly encourage dental assistants to become proficient in their profession and take the DANB certification exam.”

Dr. Dawley is a graduate of the University of Michigan School of Dentistry and currently runs her own practice in Michigan. She has been an active member of the ADA at the national, state and local levels for nearly 25 years. Dr. Dawley currently serves on the ADA’s Council on Dental Practice and previously served as the Michigan Dental Association President from 2008-2009. She is also a member of the Academy of General Dentistry, the National Dental Association, the American Academy of Fixed Prosthodontics and the Pierre Fauchard Academy.

Dr. Dawley is the recipient of numerous awards, including the Detroit District Dental Society’s 2008 Leadership and Service Award, the National Dental Association’s 2008 Phenomenal Achievement Leadership Awards and the Mercy Education Project’s 2008 Positive Impact Hard Work Dedication Award.

She belongs to several honor societies for dentists, including the American College of Dentists and the International College of Dentists. She is a Fellow in the Academy of General Dentistry.

Oral health is vital to our well being, yet dental disease remains a serious threat to America’s children. To investigate how dental professionals can best impact children’s oral health, we spoke with two leaders in pediatric dentistry—Joel Berg, DDS, MS, president-elect of the American Academy of Pediatric Dentistry (AAPD), and Marion C. Manski, RDH, MS, interim director of the dental hygiene program at the University of Maryland School of Dentistry. These two eminent clinicians shared their thoughts about the most dire threats to pediatric oral health, and what might be done to minimize them.

Both Berg and Manski agree that confusion about the timing of a child’s first dental visit is a top threat to children’s oral health. A trend that began nearly a decade ago calls to change the age of the first dental visit from age 3 to age 1, Berg says—but word has been slow to reach parents/caregivers, and even some dental and medical professionals. The risks created by delaying the first dental visit beyond age 1 are significant enough that Berg considers this the top threat to children’s oral health.

“The reason for revising the first visit to age 1 is because we are seeing an increase in early childhood caries,” Berg reports. Manski shares his concern, and points out that children at this age need to be assessed for risk factors related to nutrition, feeding and oral hygiene. She urges clinicians to take an active role in spreading the word. “The need for an oral health visit at age 1 should be emphasized to not only parents, but to practitioners as well, including pediatricians, dentists and dental hygienists.”

The National Dental Association (NDA) and the American Tennis Association (ATA) have been awarded a $15,000 grant from USTA Serves for the NDA/ATA Oral Health Literacy Program as follows: Members of the NDA will provide oral health literacy that focuses on prevention education, oral health screenings and overall physical health, to approximately 100 underserved youth enrolled during the spring and summer months in the ATA member club youth programs in conjunction with tennis programming through the 100+ ATA member clubs in the following sites: Baltimore Maryland - Maryland Dental Society; Philadelphia, Pennsylvania - The New Era Society; Newark, New Jersey - Commonwealth Dental Society. The dental professionals will provide face-to-face education, via a skills building curriculum comprised of four to six learning sessions with the following objectives:

* To promote lifelong oral health and its connection to their daily lives
* To identify healthy nutrition and eating habits, to link to overall optimum health
* To reinforce the connection to good academic performance and physical agility in athletic activities, such as tennis.

The USTA Serves grant will be used to support disadvantaged minority youth and at-risk children by linking tennis with dental education to improve quality of life among youth from all cultural and ethnic backgrounds, promote good oral health habits and evaluate the success of community based programs.
On February 15, 2012, Dr. Lyvonne M. Washington, Dr. Wayne Walker, and Dr. Jeanette Sabir-Holloway were honored in Indianapolis, IN at Many Faces, Many Facets - A Celebration of Diversity in the Dental Profession, hosted by the Indiana Dental Association (IDA). This inaugural event was history in the making in Indiana, and the NDA - Indianapolis Component could not be more proud that three of our very own were recognized as being pioneers and trailblazers in diversifying our great profession.

Dr. Lyvonne M. Washington, Dr. Wayne Walker, and Dr. Jeanette Sabir-Holloway were all recipients of the 2012 IDA Groundbreaker Award. Dr. Sabir-Holloway was honored for “groundbreaking leadership in nationwide mentoring and recruitment efforts of nontraditional students in the dental profession.” She graduated from the Indiana University School of Dentistry in 1980 and is currently in private practice in Indianapolis. Dr. Wayne Walker was honored for his “groundbreaking leadership as the first African American dentist to become President of the Isaac Knapp District Dental Society.” He obtained his dental degree in 1985 from the University of Illinois at Chicago College of Dentistry. Dr. Walker currently practices General Dentistry in Ft. Wayne, IN. Dr. Lyvonne Washington was honored for her groundbreaking leadership as the first female African American dentist to practice in Marion County. She attended Meharry School of Dentistry and is a former Miss Meharry. She is a dental retiree who resides in Indianapolis, IN.

This year’s Black History month theme is: “Black women in American History and Culture”. Black women dentist are an important part of dental history and have been an integral part of African American culture.

Although the world’s first dental school, Baltimore College of Dental Surgery, opened in 1840, it was not until 1867 when an African American, Robert T. Freeman was accepted by Harvard in its first dental class. In 1870, George franklin Grant graduated from Harvard and was appointed to the school’s dental faculty. However, before the establishment of Howard University in 1881 and the dental department of Meharry Medical College in Nashville, Tennessee in 1886, there were few black dentist being trained.

Women, although fewer in numbers made impressive progress starting with Ida Gray Rollins, D.D.S., the first African American woman graduate (1890) of the University of Michigan and the first black female practitioner in Chicago, Illinois. In 1923 Bessie Delaney graduated from the Columbia University Dental School and practiced in New York. Additional first include Jeanne C. Sinkford, D.D.S., PhD, the first American female dental dean; Eugenia Mobley McGinnis, D.D.S., M.P.H. the first black women dentist to earn a degree in public health and the second female dean of a U.S. dental school: Cynthia Hodge, D.M.D., M.P.A., the second woman NDA president and associate Dean of the University of Connecticut: Juliann Bluitt, D.D.S., former associate dean at Northwestern University Dental School, the first female president of the prestigious American College of Dentists: and Marshall Butler, D.D.S., vice president, Global Oral Health Improvement, Colgate- Palmolive Co®.

The Old North State Dental Society Scholarship

The UNC School of Dentistry recently awarded the 2011 Old North State Dental Society Scholarship to fourth-year D.D.S. student Heather M. Hendricks.

Hendricks, a self-supported dental student, is finishing up her last year of dental education while applying to orthodontic residency programs so she can become a board-certified orthodontist. Once finished with her education, the Durham native hopes to make contributions not only to her patients but also to the orthodontic and dental communities.

Coalition’s Board Chair Plays Important Role in Health Care

As the Board Chair of the Michigan Oral Health Coalition, the Dental Director of the Detroit Department of Health and Wellness Promotion, and a practicing public health dentist, Dr. Janice Harbin-Joseph plays an important role within the healthcare field.

At the DDHWP their main goals are prevention and education. Most patients come to the Department on an urgent need basis and Dr. Joseph, along with her staff, work to restore their mouths as best as they can. Initiated in the beginning of 2011, the Department also offers routine HIV testing to better the overall health of Detroit’s citizens.

Her involvement with the Coalition began with an invitation to an initial meeting in 2003 and since then she has been a board member for eight years. She “strongly believes in power of numbers,” which is exactly what the Coalition provides. Being part of a group where you can “talk, share ideas, and work on different advocacy issues make us stronger.” Dr. Joseph says that as a Coalition that represents interests from all over, it reinforces the fact that access barriers in oral health care is not just an issue in Detroit, but a statewide problem.

When asked about the future of oral health in Michigan, Dr. Joseph says that she feels very encouraged. “It appears that the governor understands the connection between oral health and overall health. Financially we do have some barriers, but I believe that the people in power understand the cost of not doing something,” she said. According to her, being proactive is always the cheaper way to go.

After working for 33 years as a public health dentist, Dr. Joseph has set her mind on educating herself to be more of a national voice for oral health. In addition to working on becoming a national advocate, she gets great satisfaction from helping with her brother’s homeless ministry and spending time with her extended family. While she describes herself as “relaxed and happy,” Dr. Joseph is clearly someone who works hard and strives to make a big difference in the oral health field, not only in Detroit, but on a national level.

Lessons In A Lunch Box Program To Reach 15,000 Children By 2012

Despite economic downturns, support continues helping to sustain the school-based oral health education initiative for a fifth straight year.

Owings Mills, Maryland  The Lessons In A Lunch Box: Healthy Teeth Essentials & Facts About Snacks® program will kick off for a fifth straight year. By the end of 2012, the school-based oral health initiative is expected to have reached 15,000 youth. Despite the challenging economy, interest in providing assistance has helped to keep the program thriving for another year. This interest has helped to expand the program, geared toward elevating the oral health of families, further into school systems nationwide.

Lunch boxes will be distributed in conjunction with the Lessons In A Lunch Box: Healthy Teeth Essentials & Facts About Snacks program presentations. These presentations are given by student dentists and hygienists, along with members of organized and community dentistry. Parents and other volunteers are usually on hand to be of assistance. The support of everyone is so meaningful because when the children engage this learning opportunity they often become so thrilled this extra help is needed.

According to The Children’s Oral Health Institute’s Executive Assistant, Ms. Khaleila Iwuoha, supplies are limited. She encourages those interested in registering a school not to delay completion of the registration forms.

There is no deadline for the registration. The lunch box program will be made available to schools as long as supplies last. To register an elementary school for the 2012 Lessons In A Lunch Box program visit The Children’s Oral Health Institute website at www.mycohi.org to complete the registration process. Email communications may be sent to Ms. Khaleila Iwuoha at kiwuoha.mcohi@gmail.com or call the free number at 866-508-7400.

We are pleased to introduce one of our newest Corporate Roundtable Members, American General Life and Accident Insurance Company, based in Nashville, TN, commonly known as AGLA. While AGLA has been providing security to American families for over 100 years, their commitment to designing new innovative solutions to provide their clients “flexibility of choice” in managing future needs, was one of the leading factors in our decision to welcome them as a provider of life insurance for our members. A quick review of this article...and I think you’ll understand why!

Not many dental practices are exactly the same and their needs for insurance coverage vary significantly! Dental Professionals need insurance coverage with lots of flexibility that allows them to address their unique circumstances.

If you could build “the ideal life insurance policy” to meet your needs...what type of features and benefits would it include? This is a question that garners a fairly lengthy and ambitious list, depending on whom you ask!

We hear things like:
• Stable, secure life insurance protection for however long I need it
• Flexible design customized to fit my situation
• Ability to access benefits while I’m living
• Ability to make changes as my business grows
• Potential to participate in growth opportunities when the market does well...but with minimum guarantees to prevent loss when it doesn’t

And of course, everyone wants all of this with an affordable, competitive premium structure!

The great news is...there are insurance providers out there listening to what today’s business professionals are saying. And, more importantly, some are taking a pro-active, innovative approach to product design and delivering some exciting new solutions!

One of the new buzz words, or phrases, some insurance companies are currently utilizing in advertising is “Living Benefits” which allow you to access a portion of your life insurance benefits while living. While many carriers, for several years now, have had provisions in some life insurance products that were marketed as living benefits, they were usually very restrictive. Most only allowed you to have part of the expected benefits from your policy paid early if you were diagnosed with a terminal illness and not expected to live much longer.

However, recent market activity suggests that consumers are responding well to products that offer the flexibility to access benefits under their life... insurance policy if they have a heart attack, stroke or are diagnosed with a critical or chronic illness...and don’t die. Many professionals say having those benefits payable under these circumstances could make the difference of whether their business fails...or survives!

While some carriers are attempting to respond to the market’s desire for flexibility by simply bundling different types of insurance policies together, others are taking a more creative approach to designing new products. That creativity has led to the development of an innovative suite of products by one carrier, American General Life and Accident Insurance Company, based in Nashville TN, commonly known as AGLA.

The marketing name for these products, Quality of Life...Insurance® was selected based on the premise that a policyholder would have the “choice” of when and how to access their life insurance benefits, if needed, to ensure the continued “quality” of their life, should certain events occur.

The differentiated approach taken by AGLA was to develop a more cost-effective solution by including coverage for multiple needs into one policy, rather than bundling several policies, thus reducing administration fees and other costs. With the introduction of this new suite of products, AGLA began offering solutions to insurance buyers that not only included the “choice” to access their life insurance benefits should they experience the type of health events discussed earlier...but expanded that list to include many more health conditions, as well as becoming disabled.

If, as with most products, new customer sales is the gauge of how well this new design has been received in the market, one would have to say that AGLA has a winner! The first design, introduced just a few years ago, was so well received that they continued to conduct consumer research to better understand the needs of their customers and designed superior differentiated solutions to meet those needs. As a result, today when an AGLA agent meets with a potential client they are able to capitalize on a consultative approach to needs analysis and risk assessment and utilize one of seven products available in the Quality of Life...Insurance®. The final recommendation is made based on which design best meets the needs and objectives of the client.

If the last few years is any indicator of the future...we expect to see forward thinking carriers, like AGLA, developing more innovative solutions that are responsive to specific types of changes in the marketplace, and/or economic conditions. As a matter of fact, recent economic conditions, the volatility of the stock market, and the current interest rate environment were some of the driving factors which spawned the launch of AGLA’s newest product, AGLAchoice® Index Plus. Realizing that many people were becoming more risk averse in their approach to investments, they designed the latest product to include basic life insurance protection and all of the “living benefits” available in other Quality of Life...Insurance® products...but took it one step further. With this plan, the client has the flexibility to determine how aggressively they contribute premiums to impact an accumulation account value which will participate in upside growth potential when the S&P 500 does well...but also has minimum interest rate guarantees to protect the client, if the market goes down. And of course, staying with their commitment to deliver flexible solutions, the client has the option of making changes along the way as their life or business circumstances change.

I think you can see that NDA members can expect AGLA to continue to pursue research that allows them to understand the consumers’ needs and respond with innovative designs, in a flexible, affordable manner. We look forward to AGLA joining us at our upcoming conference in Boca Raton.

For additional information on AGLA’s products or services please call 1-800-922-6185 or email rick.boling@agla.com. Be sure to identify yourself as an NDA Member.
